Wartime Wreck of HMS/m P-514 Found Off Trepassey, Newfoundland
HMS/m P-514 (ex-USS R-19) was mistakenly rammed and sunk, with the loss of all hands, off the southern Avalon Peninsula, Newfoundland in the early hours of 21 June 1942. HMCS Georgian and its commanding officer were completely exonerated by a subsequent inquiry. The wreck of HMS/m P-514 was recently found in perfect condition off Trepassey, Newfoundland.
HMS/m P-514 Coming Alongside at Halifax, Nova Scotia
HMS/m P-514 as USS R-19
HMCS Georgian
Ship’s Company HMCS Georgian
To the honoured memory of the Officers and Ship's Company of H.M. Submarine P.514, which was run down & sunk at 3 a.m. in a thick fog by an unwarned Convoy off the coast of Newfoundland 21 June 1942, and especially of her Commanding Officer Lieut. Walter Augustus Phillimore Royal Navy, dearly loved son of Charles Augustus & Alice Phillimore of the Old Farm in this Parish in his 27th year. We thank God for his happy life & the happiness he gave Quam Dilectus. The deck it was their field of fame And Ocean was their grave Unofficial Ship’s Crest HMCS Georgian. The Bangor-class minesweeper was credited with sinking U-517 in September 1942, but the U-boat survived with damage.

The End